

Marketing Intern Opportunity Available!

CornellCookson is the leading resource for commercial rolling steel doors and grilles and is marketed under the brand names Cornell Iron Works and The Cookson Company. We serve the commercial construction market and pride ourselves on our ability to supply the best products for our distributors and provide product support and information services to those who design, build or manage industrial, institutional and commercial buildings.

This is a paid internship program for the Fall, although may last longer. We are seeking a talented marketing / graphic design intern with a go-getter attitude. The right person will be self-motivated with the ability to participate in various stages of our companies' online and print marketing campaigns. Since we manufacture a technical product, mechanical aptitude is an asset.

Responsibilities

- Developing marketing materials for our sales and distributor networks
- Providing support and assistance with web and app design
- Assisting with support materials for new product launches
- Providing support to social media efforts

Requirements

- Students majoring in Marketing, Graphic Design, Integrative Media, Web Design, Communications or Public Relations
- Experience with Adobe Creative Suite products, MS Office, HTML, CSS and jQuery
- Interest in staying abreast of industry and social media trends, including conducting and summarizing competitive research
- Creative thinker, ability to participate and contribute to campaign ideas
- Independent problem solver
- Excellent verbal and written communication skills with strong command of the English language
